PROMISED LAND

November 22 2008 – January 24 2009

Curated by Filippo Tattoni-Marcozzi

PROMISED LAND is a group show examining the existing relationship between artists and landscape, fantasy and reality and the interpretation of ideals and dreams through a personal vision of everything that surrounds us.

PROMISED LAND will feature the work of an international group of artists, who have a mutual need to confront one of the most ancient genre of art history and of the human debate: the understanding and the description of landscape.

This representation can appear to be pragmatic or idealized, symbolic or imaginary, a “promised land” that expresses the personal world of every artist, his vision, his belief and imagination.

The work featured in this show includes a large canvas by the American artist Peter Halley, a video by Jennifer Steinkamp, a photograph by the German artist Elger Esser, together with other works by young, talented, emerging artists such as the Israeli photographer Kobi Israel and paintings by British artists Adam Ball and Dan Perfect. Also included is the German artist Junior Toscanelli and other Italian artists as Matteo Fato, Tu M’ and the video artist Marcella Vanzo.

The exhibition will also show interesting comparisons and dialogues with the works of artists from the previous generation including Michelangelo Pistoletto, Lucio Fontana and Mario Giacomelli, from private collections.
